Hi George,

Any thoughts on this web generated question that came to me from HQ?

Name: Andre Martin
Email Address: Andre@cipa.com
Comments: I recently received some information on injection wells within California and was wondering what, if any, level of reporting to the public as far as location of these well and purpose or use of well, is required by companies to disclose that use injection wells? Thank you

Joel found public notification requirements for Well Stimulation, but nothing for permit applicants yet. I was also wondering how Community Right-to-Know Act and TRI are handled for Oil & Gas wells.

Thanks,
Leslie

Hi Leslie,

There is a public disclosure provision for permit applicants (at least in the federal regs). I don't recall if that is for any UIC permit, or only certain types. Further, given the requestor (CA oil and gas trade organization), it's not clear that there is such an obligation in DOGGR's regulations. Maybe Michele or Joel could help you find the citation/requirement in the federal regs and Joel can track down whether there is such a requirement under DOGGR's Class II regulations. David

Hi David,

I don't know if I've ever had this question before. To your knowledge, is there any public disclosure?

Thanks,
Leslie
